

THE MEDFORD MATTER

April 13, 2016 begins another round of Police False Reporting.

This time, it's begun (again!) by Sergeant O'Hara of the Scituate (Massachusetts) Police – but his chief, W. Michael Stewart, decided to take responsibility for authorizing the false reporting, so, we'll leave it to the good people of Scituate, MA to decide what kind of police department they want...O'Hara used a false pretext to have a car pulled over by the Hingham Police Department. But, hours later...

Then it's Detective Norton of the Medford Police Department, reporting falsely about a civil contact made in the early evening...his reflex reaction to a civil contact is to make a criminal out of somebody or somebodies...the same two who were victims of police shenanigans earlier in the day. ATTC has an analysis of Detective Norton's false report and will publish it in due time.

To find the beginning of a pattern of police prejudicing, one should look at where it started in Massachusetts for one Driver (the main subject of the Access To The Courts website), in 2002...

The Northampton Matter

An intermittent inoperative headlamp (after a 500 mile interstate trip back to university), resulted in three criminal charges by MSP Officers Jeffrey Roberts and Brian Pearl, while NOT even prosecuting the Driver for the alleged (reason for a second pull over) Assault With a Deadly Weapon – Automobile. Charges resulted in no guilty findings or verdicts, but changed the life of the Driver forever.
